

Authorization to Share Coursework via a Course Website

In order to practice different types of writing styles across genres and modalities, this course (ENGL 105, Writing at the Research University, Sections 079 and 91, taught by Paul Blom, Fall 2020 at UNC-Chapel Hill) will incorporate a website to showcase the final drafts of each student's unit project. In addition, each student will post to the course blog once throughout the semester. The course website is at <https://engl105fa2020sec079.web.unc.edu/>.

As students, you all have the right to educational privacy, which means you cannot be made to publicly share your final drafts of your assignments. It is entirely your decision if you are willing to share your final drafts with the public or with each other. If you choose to make your work visible to each other and/or to the public, this will involve you posting your work yourself directly onto the website. If you provide permission, you can withdraw it at any time for any and all individual assignments.

Authorization:

I give permission for my instructor, Paul Blom, to use my work in this course (ENGL 105, Sections 079 and 091, Fall 2020), specifically final drafts of each of my three unit projects and a course blog post, on our course website. I authorize that my work can be shared on the course website (<https://engl105fa2020sec079.web.unc.edu/>) in the following manner:

- I authorize that my work can be shared on the course website in a manner that is public. My name will be attached to my work and open to the public.
- I authorize that my work can be shared on the course website in a manner that is only open to other members of this class (i.e., my instructor and other classmates). My name will be attached to my work, but this content will only be accessible to other members of this class.
- I withhold authorization for any distribution of my work.

I understand that as a student of the University of North Carolina I retain ownership of all academic work I create with the exception of cases outlined in the University's copyright policy (sponsored or externally contracted work, works for hire, and works authored by faculty members with assistance from a student). My rights in the work include the right to publish, reproduce, distribute, publicly perform or display the work. (<http://www.lib.unc.edu/copyright/policies.html>, see Section V. D.).

Permission will exist indefinitely unless otherwise specified.

If we choose to limit the visibility of the overall website or specific posts to only members of this class, then we will do so using a class password. Your signature here indicates your pledge to not share the password or website content (your peers' work) with anyone outside of our class. To share such content would be a violation of our class community, a violation of this pledge, and a violation of the University Honor Code.

---

[student signature]

---

[date]

---

[student name and ENGL 105 section number, please print]

---

[student email or other contact information]